Sociolinguistic Perspectives

Raymond Hickey and Carolina P. Amador Moreno (eds)

Berlin/New York: de Gruyter Mouton

Early 2020, c 410 pages

The present volume offers in-depth examinations of the many facets of language and identity in the complex linguistic landscape of Ireland. The position of the heritage language Irish is considered as are the different varieties of English spoken in geographically and socially diverse parts of the island. Language as a vehicle of national and cultural identity is centre-stage as is the representation of identity in various contexts.
